The Boat Ride

Written and Illustrated by Herminder Ohri

In a small garden in the tree. A family of squirrels one member of that family cousin, Kato had come to city, there was a big pipal lived on that tree. Vikki is who likes to talk big. His visit him from Far Forest.

"Today we shall go on a big boat," said Vikki to Kato. "B...B...But, I...I...am afraid of water, I can not swim," mumbled Kato.

"Come on, you scrappy squirrel! With Vikki around, you need not be afraid. I have been on a boat many times."

Vikki importantly leading the way, they reached the river.

The boat was tied to a post, so they ran up the rope; hopped into the boat and sat curled in a corner.

Slowly the boat started moving up and down the river, which curled and curved through the trees. Kato saw many ducks swimming past them. The fish put their heads out of the water and gulped a "Hello!" Some swans majestically glided near them.

They were so beautiful that Kato tried to touch one and he toppled over into the river. As he went deeper into the water, he passed some fish. "Help! Help!" he gurgled, as he passed the boat.

Vikki did not know what to do. He just scampered from one side of the boat to the other side, shouting, "Help! Squirrel overboard!" A swan had seen Kato fall into the water. She just put her head down in the water and picked up Kato in her beak. Then she tossed him into the boat.

A shivering, trembling Kato sat in a sunny corner to dry himself. Vikki sat quietly near him.

As he got warm and dry he cheered up, "What an adventure! Wait till I tell the folks back home." Already he fancied himself as A Sailor! A Hero! Brave and Adventurous!

When the boat reached the bank, the squirrels hopped off and swaggered their way home. Kato was finding it difficult to keep his grand adventure inside his head. His head was going round and round like the boat.

He shut his eyes and fell Fast asleep at the dinner table.

Vikki, the squirrel likes to talk big. His cousin came to visit him and they went on a boat ride. They were having fun when things turned rather adventurous...
